James Edward Can Box and Fight, Has Two Good Hands and an Effective Crouch—Something for Nelson to Overcome.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

WILL Battling Nelson be able to continue unbroken his string of victories when he meets Jimmy Britt? If Britt were a broken-down fighter, like Young Corbett, weakened by dissipation, there would be only one answer. But Britt is not. He takes good care of himself all the time. Moreover, he is Nelson's superior as a boxer, and I am inclined to think that his sound as a fighter. Britt's tendency to fight in the rough style affected by Nelson was shown when Jimmy met Joe Gans.

As a defensive boxer Britt has no superior. He fought Martin Canale in San Francisco. Canale is one of the most clever boxers in the world. He used the Fitzsimmons shift about six times a minute, but even with that he never reached a vulnerable spot on Britt's anatomy. He could not get to Britt's jaw at all.

Britt uses a crouch unlike that used by any other boxer. He stands fairly straight, but drops his head forward. His left arm is held close to his side; his right hand is just below his chin, in position for either a guard or a

NATIONAL LEAGUERS IN SECOND DAY'S SESSION

Post Season Series May Be Decided On To-day at Hotel Victoria—Pietz Traded to Pittsburgh for Catcher Phelps.

The National League magnates began the second day's session of their annual meeting shortly after noon at the Victoria Hotel. Many important matters are to come up for consideration before the confab ends. Perhaps the most important of these is that dealing with a post-season series between the National and American Leagues. None of the magnates would express himself on the subject to-day, but it is understood that all agree that the games should be played.

The trades that have been spoken of began to-day when it was officially announced that "Hottel" Pietz, the great catcher of the Cincinnati team, will be traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Another piece of news coming to the surface to-day was the announcement that Tommy Corcoran had signed to again play short for the "Reds."

Harmony Rule Prevails.

So far there has been nothing but harmony at the meeting, and when Garry Herrmann proposed the post-season games for the championship of the world he does not expect the harmony rule to be broken.

Another important matter will be taken up at to-day's meeting will be the schedule. Instead of 134 games, as played last season, the number will be cut down to 140 games if the present plans go through.

The increasing of the drafting price for minor league players will also be discussed, and Howard Griffiths, of the Jersey City Club, will argue in favor of $1,500 for players of the first class instead of $1,000. Mr. Griffiths will be listened to attentively, and then the magnates will vote solidly against him, for a majority of the members are opposed to a raise.

The Committee on Rules.

During to-day's meeting the League will appoint the Rules Committee. Manager "Ned" Hamilton of Brooklyn, James A. Hart, of Chicago, and Max Fleishman, of Cincinnati. This committee will meet a similar committee from the American League next spring, and no definite announcement of any changes in the rules can be made. There is a disposition to make no changes whatsoever.

It was said that the magnates to-day would increase President Pulliam's salary in appreciation of his services, placing it probably at $10,000, to equalize that of the president of the American League.

Barney Dreyfuss, looking the picture of health, and with a bunch of greenbacks in his pocket that a hundred could not jump over, entered the corridor a little late. "What are you here for, Barney?" he was asked. "I am here to buy some new players, and also to buy the bankrupt next year from my men."

THE VICTORIA was William Shetlesline, who has been made president of the Philadelphia National League team for next season. "Shetles" was warmly congratulated by the other magnates on his new position and every one wished him success.

Jim Hart, chief owner of the stock in the Chicago Club and one of the rulers of the big league, was another magnate whose hand was often shaken by the others during the day. Jim has a cunning smile, a pleasant disposition, and as neat a way at dodging a question relative to the affairs of the league as one would care to run against.

That strong combination of the league, Messrs. Hart, Charley Ebbets and Barney Dreyfuss, took lunch together and between their sips of coffee they decided on a few new tricks to hand out at the meeting. They were probably talking over the matter of reducing the schedule for next season to 140 games.

The two defeated candidates for the Senatorship, Charley Ebbets and "Shut" O'Loughlin, were introduced to each other, and the first remark they exchanged was: "What best you?" Both of them admitted that Roosevelt had dealt them a solar plexus blow, and they parted, saying they were pleased to meet each other.

Garry Herrmann loaded down with a pocketful of check books and several unsigned contracts, blew in with his faithful captain, "Smiling Joe" Kelly. "How do you feel, Garry?" "Never better," replied the Cincinnati magnate. "Let's have a drink."

That same old habit still sticks to Johnny Dunn and Joe Kelley. As soon as they had greeted each other they quietly moved over into a corner of the corridor and pulling out a bunch of newspapers began looking up the dope on the horses. In a few minutes they dodged out of the door and rushed to the nearest poolroom where they remained during the afternoon placing bets on the horses.

Fred Clarke, manager-captain of the Pittsburgh team, looked like a typical Westerner when he strode through the swinging doors of the hotel. He wore a big black sombrero, a loose-fitting three-quarter coat with a belt in the back, and a plaid suit of clothes. The only thing missing about Fred's napoleon was the seven-shooter.

MAIN BOUT ENDS IN KNOCKOUT

(Special to The Evening World.)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 14.—In the first bout at the Cambridge A. A. last night, Joe Robinson, of Chelsea, was knocked out in one round by Tim Quill, of Brockton. In the second bout, K. Henshaw, was outboxed by Larry Connelly, and the referee awarded the decision to the latter in the fourth round.

In the main event Frank Adams put up a clever bout against Matt Baldwin for six rounds. In the seventh round Adams landed a right counter on

THE BELVIDERES
STILL IN LEAD

Lotus Five Had Hoped Last Night's Harlem League Game Would Break Tie for First Place.

The Lotus team did not get the lead they expected at the conclusion of the games in the Harlem League last night. It was expected that either the Algonquins or the Harlem five would defeat the Belvideres and bring them away from first place, for which they are tied with the Lotus five.

In their first game the Belvideres were fortunate in winning from the Algonquins, as the latter's scores were far below the average. In the game with Harlem the Algonquins showed their true form and had little trouble in winning. Joe Hales and Dr. Lockwood got well above the double century mark, and with the good bowling of their team mates, put up the score of 864. The Harlems were more than 100 pins behind.
